

FIRST WORLD WAR

1914 - 1918

Volunteers from Argentina who gave their lives in The Great War

They shall grow not old, as we that are left grow old:
Age shall not weary them, nor the years condemn.
At the going down of the sun and in the morning,
We will remember them.

194	FAIRBAIRN, James John Waters	Lieut.	York & Lancaster Regt, Sheffield City Bn.	Central Argentine Railway.	Born 14th April 1884 and spent the early part of his life in South Africa where, besides occupying various positions in business, he served for about two and a half years with the Rand Rifles and the Durham Light Infantry. He came to Argentina in 1906, where he served the Buenos Ayres & Pacific Railway until he joined the Central Argentine Railway in September 1909. He was then employed in the Carriage & Wagon Department at Rosario, where his father held a responsible position. In October, 1914, Fairbairn volunteered for active service and proceeded to England and enlisted in the Sheffield City Battalion of the York and Lancashire Regiment, in which corps he subsequently received a commission. Shortly afterwards he was drafted to France where he was severely wounded in both feet by shrapnel in 1917. During convalescence, he married, and later went to India, where he served at Peshawar and Dacen during the campaign on the Afghan frontier of 1919. He was demobilized in 1919 with the rank of Lieutenant, and after a few months' leave in England, he returned to Argentina at the end of March 1920 on the Highland Pride to begin work at the Chief Mechanical Engineer's office in Rosario. The state of his health due to his wounds, however, was so serious that he had to be immediately admitted to the British Hospital in Buenos Aires, was operated, and died on the afternoon of the 21st April 1920. He was buried in the British Cememetry at Chacarita. Commemorated at St Bartholomew Church in Rosario. https://www.google.co.uk/#q=st+john's+uenos+n+cathedral+_uenos+aires. Educated at St Andrew's Scots School. In Argentina neither recruiting speeches, posters, nor newspaper appeals were needed to rouse Britons and their descendants, of military age, to action, or to awaken them to a sense of duty to the Motherland. They heard in August 1914, that the Old Country had trouble on hand, and that was enough. Thereafter their one main objective was England. Voluntarily and promptly they left their posts, and in many cases crossed the seas at their own expense, with no better pecuniary reward in view than a shilling a day. The earliest departures included railway and bank employees, business men, engineers, lawyers, doctors, teachers, mechanics, clerks, estancia and farm owners and farm hands, and in short, representatives of almost every profession and trade. Neither distance from port, nor difficulties of travel were any discouragement. From the far off region of the southern Andes, from Patagonia, from the sugar plantations of Tucumán, from the forest zones of the Chaco, from the estancia establishments in the plains of the province of Buenos Aires and the Pampa, from the hilly districts of Cordoba, and the province of Santa Fé, from the low lying districts of Entre Rios and Corrientes, in a word from north to south and east to west, they wended their way to Buenos Aires to take the first ship homeward bound.

To attract recruits there were not that magnetism of a prestige to uphold, the prestige of a Colony or Protectorate, such as stimulated recruiting in all parts of the Empire. Men spoke in undertone about recruiting from a neutral country, and care had to be taken to avoid infringement of the neutrality laws. These things did not damp the patriotic spirit nor diminish the homeward flight. On arrival in England the volunteers from Argentina lost whatever identity they had as such, and enrolled in almost every branch of H.M. Forces, becoming Soldiers of the King. It was some eighteen months after the outbreak of war, that steps were taken to establish an organization in London to look after the welfare and interests of volunteers from the River Plate; it was then too late to get in touch with many of them; hundreds had already paid the full price of their patriotism and had died for Freedom and Honour.

The military value of men from Argentina is well set out by the number who obtained commissions in H.M. Forces. Close on one third of them were thus honoured, and a very large proportion of the remainder obtained warrant and non-commissioned rank. The distinctions and awards speak forcibly on the same point.

Being without corporate existence, it follows that there are no records of their actions collectively. They fought and died on every front: France, Belgium, Flanders, Italy, Salonika, the Dardanelles, the Balkans, Bulgaria, Egypt, Palestine, Mesopotamia, German East Africa, German South West Africa, Nigeria, Russia and India; on the sea and in the air. The few published notices concerning their participation in the respective campaigns do not tell us much. At the outset of the war, King Edward's Horse attracted many Argentine volunteers. In 1915 the 2nd K.E.H. was incorporated, voluntarily, with the Canadian Forces as infantry, and on return to duty as cavalry with the Imperial Army in France, the following Order of the Day was issued:

“On the 2nd King Edward's Horse leaving the Canadian Corps, the Corps Commander wishes to place on record his own personal (and also that of the whole Corps) recognition and appreciation of all the excellent work that the regiment has done.

It volunteered, at a time of stress for the Canadian Corps. To come with the other two Regiments of the Canadian Cavalry Brigade and act as infantry until such a time as the Corps should be up to strength again.

During the period, which has been much longer than was expected, the 2nd King Edward's Horse has not only fought and worked excellently, but it has also set an excellent example of good conduct and discipline that has been marked by all who know it.

The whole Canadian Corps much regrets the departure of the 2nd King Edward's Horse.”

An official expression of their fighting qualities is found in a communication received by the River Plate Contingent Committee, from the Army Council which says:

“The Army Council desires you to convey to the committee and the British residents in South America their heartiest appreciation of their action, and their deep sense of gratitude for the patriotic assistance they have given, and to congratulate them on the results they have achieved in sending such a large contingent of men unique in their fighting qualities.”
